PREFACE

I take pleasure in placing before you this volume, the aim of which is to preserve the genealogy of the several lines of our family connections, least of all for my own benefit, but especially for those of the same lines who may now or in future years would appreciate an account of their families.

In her latter years especially, my mother was very much interested in her relationships, and if I had become more interested myself during her lifetime there would no doubt be many things to tell which have been lost or forgotten, and which would have saved me a great amount of labor to ascertain later.

The Pattersons, Boons, Taggarts and Bonhams were a sturdy and strong willed people. In stature rather short and stout. They were of dark complexion. In religion, Orthodox Methodists, and they believed in the teachings of the Holy Bible, and the Golden Rule. Politically they were Democrats.

The Wheat family came from England, and belonged to the Church of England, but in this country they became Methodists and United Brethren. Many of the Wheat descendants were ministers and doctors. They believed in the Saving Power of Jesus Christ our Saviour, and that the Bible is the inspired Word of God.

The Wheats were tall, medium complexion, high foreheads, auburn hair, gray eyes, with graceful but determined minds. They had strong will power with high ideals, and they were above the average intellectually. Politically they were Jacksonian Democrats, but in later years a few, like sheep, have gone astray.

The Hearn's were domestic in their inclinations being carpenters, millrights and farmers. They were a hardy, strong and medium sized people. Dark in complexion, dark gray eyes. They were Universalists in belief. They believed in education and culture. And in politics they were Democrats.

I have taken considerable care to be sure that what is told herein is authentic, but of course there will be some errors, which I trust you will pardon, and correct them in your volume.

I desire to earnestly thank all who assisted me with the collection of data, and for information which I solicited.

Very respectfully,

Rowena Emmeline Hearn Randle.

PATTERSON GENEALOGY

Benjamin Boone and his brother, Squire Boone, emigrated from England to America in the early part of the eighteenth century, somewhere between the years 1712-17, and settled in what is now Fairfax County, West Virginia. Squire Boone and his wife, Sarah Boone, had a son, Daniel Boone, who became the Daniel Boone of hunting fame. Benjamin Boone and his wife, Anna Boone, had one daughter, Mary Anna Boone. When the Boone brothers were ready to sail from England, a young man by the name of Samuel Patterson, of England, a friend of the family, and lover of Mary Anna Boone, asked that he might accompany them to America. The Boones were glad, it seemed, for his company and brought the lad with them. Samuel Patterson was the son of Benjamin and Mary Elisebeth Melbourn Patterson. Mary Elisebeth Melbourn was the daughter of James Ford and Mary Elisebeth Melbourn of England. In due time after settling in Fairfax, Samuel Patterson and Mary Anna Boone were united in marriage, and to them a son was born, Benjamin Patterson. Benjamin grew to manhood, was a lawyer and magistrate. Married Jemima Price; they had a son Robert, who with his mother died at the time of his birth. Benjamin Patterson married for his second wife, Mary Taggart, daughter of Thomas and Mary Bonham Taggart. To them were born five children as follows:

- (I) Hannah Bonham Patterson.
- (I) Mary (Polly) Patterson.
- (I) John Melbourn Patterson.
- (I) Robert Augustus Patterson.
- (I) Thomas Taggart Patterson.

(I) Hannah Bonham Patterson and Family. Methodist.
Portland, Indiana.

Hannah Bonham, daughter of Benjamin and Mary Bonham Taggart Patterson, was born at Fairfax, West Virginia, February 6, 1790. Died near Portland, Indiana, of apoplexy, February 1, 1848. She was married August 6, 1807, at Charlottsville, Virginia, to Charles Samuel Shannon. This marriage proved a failure, as Charles S. Shannon demanded that Hannah Bonham Shannon's father, Benjamine Patterson, deed him a farm, which was not agreed to. So after a marriage of four months, Charles S. Shannon left his young bride. Benjamine Patterson took his daughter Hannah to his home and applied at once for a divorce, and had her maiden name of Hannah Bonham Patterson restored. On July 20, 1808, a son was born to Hannah Bonham Patterson, which was named Charles Shannon Patterson. Benjamine Patterson later adopted Charles S. Patterson, thus making him his legal heir, and gave him the name Charles Patterson.

(X) Charles Patterson and Family. Methodist.
Waverly, Missouri.

Charles, son of Hannah Bonham Patterson and adopted son of Benjamine Patterson, was born July 20, 1808, in Pennsylvania. Died March 1, 1873, in Waverly, Missouri. After the second marriage of Hannah Bonham Patterson in Charlottesville, Pennsylvania, September 13, 1810, to Thomas Wheat, (for Hannah Bonham Patterson Wheat data look in Wheat Genealogy), Charles Patterson made his home with his mother, Hannah Bonham Wheat and his step-father, Thomas Wheat. At the age of 16, Charles Patterson was apprenticed out to learn the printer's trade with the firm of Gales and Seaton, Washington, D. C., publishers of the "Intelligencer." This trade Charles followed during his life. Charles Patterson married September 8, 1835, at Charlottesville, Virginia, to Margaret Wingfield. To them was born one child: James Melbourn.

THE WHEAT GENEALOGY

The history of the name Wheat as handed down by our forefathers, was that a baby boy was found in a wheat field by the wheat garner on the estate of the Prince of Wales. The baby was at once taken to the home of the Prince, and as no trace of parentage of the baby boy could be found, the Prince kept the boy and gave him the name of William Wheat and educated him; then started him in business in London as a merchant. William Wheat married and had one son, Solomon, a doctor. This Doctor Solomon had two sons, and it is supposed by those who have made careful search, that our branch of that name are descendants of one of these sons, as we can clearly trace our lineage from Zachariah Wheat, who was born in England in the year 1750, came to this country and settled in Prince George county, Maryland. Married in 1778 to Priscilla Flagg Ridgeway, of Alexandria, Virginia. To them were born three children:

(I) Johnathan Wheat.

(I) Elisebeth Wheat.

(I) Thomas Wheat.

(I) Johnathan Wheat was born in the year 1779. Died, 1848. Married, but had no children.

(I) Elisebeth Wheat was adopted by a family in Prince George county, Maryland, where she died unmarried.

(I) Thomas Wheat, the third child of Zachariah Wheat and Priscilla Flagg Ridgeway Wheat, was born in Prince George county, Maryland, July 27, 1789.

Zachariah Wheat died in 1792 in Prince George county, Maryland. Priscilla Flagg Ridgeway Wheat married for her second husband, Basil Phelps. To them were born three children:

Basil Phelps.

Levi Phelps.

Robert Phelps.

Basil Phelps, Sr. died and left the three small children for the mother to raise. In 1809 the Widow Phelps with her three young sons, and her son Thomas Wheat, removed to Painted Post, New York, where she died in February, 1837, and was buried at Burnes Corner cemetery.

Thomas Wheat, the third child of Zachariah and Priscilla Flagg Ridgeway Wheat, of poor parentage, and was forced, therefore, to work to help support the family. He received very little schooling until he was 18 years of age, then he only attended school two winter terms. In the year 1812 he entered the Army as a volunteer and served six months in the Western Army of New York. He was converted on the 3rd day of March, 1817, when the Lord spoke peace to his soul, and at once he joined the Methodist Episcopal church, and at once began serving his God in public exhortations, and soon received license to exhort. In 1826 he was examined and received his license to preach. In the year 1831, July 31, he was ordained by Bishop Soul. He was a faithful worker for his Master at all times in Steuben county, New York, yet did not neglect his duties as a farmer. After residing in New York for 29 years, and the father of 12 children, he, like many of his neighbors, took the western fever, and in the latter part of 1836, with his wife and children, started west with three white covered Rockaway wagons drawn by horse teams. They reached Madison, Indiana, in the winter, where they rented a house. When they started west, Illinois was their object of location, but at this time Indiana was being boosted, and as the weather was cold and the distance not so far, after stopping in Madison for three months, they reloaded their wagons and started north, through verdant forests, over hills, through mud and cold wet weather. They landed in Portland, Jay county, Indiana, in March, 1837.

Reverend Thomas Wheat was his own true self and Christian worker. After getting his family settled and resting up, he at once began his Christian work (as he had his license to preach, which the Methodist Conference of Steuben county, New York, had given him) by holding meetings in the homes, in school houses and log churches, wherever way opened, walking or riding horseback, always carrying his knapsack with him. Portland at this time had less than a dozen houses.

Rev. Thomas Wheat and his oldest child, Benjamine P. Wheat, also a licensed preacher, held the first camp meeting ever held in Jay county, Indiana (two miles west of Portland, on the Rev. George Whiteman farm, later known as the Henry Kinsey farm), September 7, 1839. After this there were many camp meetings held; a get-together for mutual Christian uplift and to get better acquainted, the people often driving many miles. The last camp meeting held was two and a half miles south-west of Portland, on what is now known as the Judge Haynes farm. These camp meetings were held close to some spring of clear flowing water. His youngest son, Samuel Wheat, was converted at this last meeting, joined the Methodist church and became an exhorter, and followed ministering and school teaching until his death.

Rev. Thomas Wheat was transferred to the Mississinewa Circuit in 1849. Previous to this time he had joined the United Brethren and they had received him as a minister and also allowed him to carry his previous licenses, but later he returned to the church of his first choice. At the time of his charge in the Mississinewa circuit, his wife, Hannah B. Patterson Wheat, died. Some years later Reverend Wheat met and married for his second wife Sarah Moore McKeever, and with her settled at Trask P. O., Grant county, Indiana, and continued his preaching in the Mississinewa Circuit. Father Wheat remained a faithful itinerant, doing all he could to uplift the church, and his wish was that he might be a faithful worker for his Master to the end of his life. He took severely sick with kidney trouble in his pulpit one Sunday morning, and was a severe sufferer for ten days, yet he said to his grandson, Joseph Gillett Wheat, who was with him, that his pain was extremely severe, yet these days were his happiest days. "My soul is very peaceful and if it is the Lord's will that I go to Him, I am ready."

Reverend Wheat died March 30, 1860. After funeral services his body was laid to rest at Trask, on the bank of the beautiful Mississinewa river. (Sleep on, sainted Father. The tomb will not always hold thee. The bright morn of resurrection will restore thy soul and take thee up to Heaven.) The life of Thomas Wheat was Christ. He as an exhorter urged the people to live honestly before God and man, and to always remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy.

(I) Rev. Thomas Wheat and Family. Methodist.

Trask, Grant County, Indiana.

Thomas, minister and farmer, was born in Prince George county, Maryland, July 21, 1789. Died March 30, 1860, at Trask, Indiana. Married September 13, 1810, at Painted Post, New York, to Hannah Bonham Patterson, daughter of Benjamine and Mary Bonham Taggart, daughter of Mary Bonham and Thomas Taggart. Hannah Bonham Patterson was born February 6, 1790. Died February 1, 1848, on their home farm near Brice, Jay county, Indiana. Was buried in the Morehous graveyard three miles east of Portland, Indiana. After settling in Portland in 1837, Thomas Wheat and wife kept hotel on South Meridian street, purchased their farm and in 1844 moved on to this farm.

Benjamin Patterson Wheat was the oldest of 12 children; was a blacksmith by trade, and minister, being converted in his childhood days, and worked for his Lord and Master the remainder of his life, he having served during his time in the United Brethren and Methodist Episcopal churches. He with his family moved west with his father, in a wagon drawn by horses, and located in Portland, Indiana, in the month of March, 1837, where he was soon made a member of the Cincinnati M. E. Conference, and was given a circuit, a circuit rider, as they were then called in eastern Indiana and middle and southern Ohio. He with his father worked in the first camp meeting held in Jay county, near Portland, Indiana. Benjamin Wheat after moving to Tonica, Illinois, became a large man, weighing 300 pounds. He was a fine singer, with a very loud strong voice, fine for camp meeting services.

mitted to the Green County Bar, Pennsylvania, November 23, 1836. He came west in 1838, with all his possessions in a knapsack and on horseback, and settled in Geneva, Indiana. There were only two log houses in Geneva at this time. After boarding in Geneva for six months, he moved again on horseback to Winchester, Indiana, where in October, 1839, he was admitted to the Randolph County Bar, to practice law, and in March, 1840, he was privileged to practice law in the counties of Jay, Adams and Allen, and was admitted to practice in the Supreme Court of Indiana, 1848, and also as Circuit Judge, which extended from Winchester to Ft. Wayne, Indiana. Sometimes walking, sometimes riding horseback on these trips, one of his stopping places was at Portland, at the Wheat Inn, and here it was that he met Mary Elisebeth Wheat, daughter of Thomas Wheat, the inn keeper, where they were married January 13, 1842, and settled in Winchester, Indiana, where he and his wife lived until 1859. Frederick H., railroader, son of Ruth Adaline Hearn and Lewis Evilsizer, was born in Yates Center, Kansas, August 29, 1891.

The attached poem was written two weeks before Ruth Adaline Hearn Evilsizer died:

A Premonition

On May 10, the very day that Mrs. R. A. Evilsizer was stricken with pneumonia, the disease which brought about her death, the latest poem written by her appeared in the columns of the Dalton, Georgia, Citizen. It is entitled, "I Shall Sleep Sound Tonight." The same issue of the Citizen pays a glowing tribute to Mrs. Evilsizer's memory.

I Shall Sleep Sound Tonight.

O life, I am tired of your tumult and toil!
The trail of the serpent your beauties despoil;
And whited sepulchers but hide from view
The deeds of uncleanness the Pharisees do.
True love's a delusion, ambition a fraud,
And men only work that the world may applaud;
From scenes that distress me I fain would take flight,
And I shall sleep sound on my pillow tonight.

The white lillies droop and the red roses fade;
The fairest of hopes in the dust are soon laid;
In vain I seek for a bliss that's denied—
'Tis only a phantom that walks by my side;
The cup that I quaff is more bitter than sweet,
The path that I tread is too rough for my feet,—
'Tis only a step to a land of delight,
And I shall sleep sound on my pillow tonight!

The boatman is calling and I must depart,
 So part thee with sorrow, my poor aching heart;
 The breezes blow soft from a happier clime,
 Where never comes blight nor the cold winter's rime;
 The odorous flowers are fadeless and fair,
 And dreams of the soul are all realized there;
 O haste thee, pale pilot, the moorin's in sight!
 And I shall sleep sound on my pillow tonight.

Farewell, O, Farewell, and a last, long good bye!
 I leave thee, vain world, with not even a sigh;
 Thy heart is as cold as the waters of death,
 And colder by far than its life chilling breath;
 To lie in the clasp of a sod-covered grave
 Shall be the one boon at thy false hands I crave;
 I would not turn back on life's road if I might,
 And I shall sleep sound on my pillow tonight.

Letter of John Wesley Wheat to his parents, Thomas and Hannah Wheat, Portland, Indiana.

Sullivan, Moultrie County, Illinois,

December 25, 1840.

Dear Parents:

I am at home once more, safe and sound, after traveling through mud and ice. I was ten days on the road. I stopped two days at McClelland's to see if the weather would moderate. On Saturday, I left there, and, on Sunday last, about 4 o'clock p. m., I landed in this place. There has not been one tenth part of as much snow and rain here as there had been there. The rivers and creeks have not risen any as yet. I found Eleanor well. I have been well myself, since I left there. Eleanor sends her best wishes to you all. Wants Jane to accept that edging as present from her. Sends to Cecilia her thanks for the present she sent her, and was seemingly overjoyed to hear that you were well. She is still anxious to go to Oregon. I intend going in the spring if I keep well enough. I do not think it exaggeration to say that one thousand families will go from this state to Oregon next summer. If you can get Robert in the notion to go there, I believe it would be the best thing you could do.

I told mother I would send her a composition which I wrote while at school at Hillsboro. It secured to me the first prize, Paley's Philosophy". I read it before the trustees of the Academy on the seventeenth day of March, 1840. It is an Acrostic on the following war, as to wit: "The sober second thought of the people is the stepstone to democracy, and the path that has conducted so many of our states in the late elections to the support of the administration."—(M. Van Buren). Also on the initials of the names of some young folks who rode by when I was writing:

On the Twenty-ninth Day of February, 1840.

Tomorrow and tomorrow steals off the Hour of life 'till unconscious man yields to the Embrace of death. Then years on years in swift Succession course have swept to mouldering heaps
Our "Bable Towers" and, in their flight, have Buried in oblivion the powerful
Empire, and her proudest cities are in Ruins piled. Thus, with years that are past, have Shared time-honored things, and thus would I, to Enumerate their past events, deign to Call attention to my Leap Year's Song.
Other four years have passed their annual course
'Neath circling Sun and ever-changing Moon.
Death hath been active in his silent course,
To sweep his victims to a waiting tomb;
Hopes he hath baffled—friendship's ties unloosened—
O'er beauty's cheek hath spread his chilling dew—
Unbound the fetters of the rich and poor—
Given grief to millions—but a joy to few—
How lov'd, how honor'd once, avails them not;
To whom related, or by whom forgot.
One heap of dust awaits the high, the low—
For forms substantial finds no place below,
The Bard himself hath fell like those he's sung.
His pen is drop'd and silent is his tongue—
E'en the lone youth who grieves with orphan lays,
Perchance tomorrow needs the tear he pays—
E'en on the breast where rests the infant boy,
Or—smiling mother feels no wane of joy,
Pleased with the sight, Death views her tender care,
Leaps on his prey, and leaves her in despair.
Earth is his sphere—he finds a full control,
In busy ranges to the distant poll.
Such is the globe on which vain man doth dwell,
Time rolls it round, and Death awakes the knell;—
How vain a life; how thickly set with snares;
Each morning breeze perchance in silence bears
Some dread effluvia, poisoning every gale,

To impregnate air for feeble man to inhale,
Elements combine in secret cares within,
Pent up with fires preparing to begin
Some bursting war upon the nether plain
To o'er-whelm the city or o'ertake the swain;—
On lightning wings the subtle fluid flies
'Neath pending clouds and summer's sultry skies—
Earth feels its shock—the attractive one its breath;
The shaft's directed and vain man meets death.
O'er Earth's domains where feeble man strays,
Death marks his footsteps and his work displays;
Each age and rank doth share an equal doom—
Men of all orders find an equal tomb.
On fame's past page now let us cast our eye—
Call up each image as it passes by—
Remove the veil, nor let the shadow pass—
And scan them closely with our powerful glass—
Caught by desire of fame or vain applause,
Youth, inexperienced, speaks of better laws;
And dares compete with old experienced sage,
Now heeds his wisdom nor reveres his age;—
Denounces all his fathers taught before,
Thinks them all wrong, and his the secret lore,—
His the sound doctrine—his the nations praise,—
Enlightening wisdom from my councils blaze.
Preached though to all, yet few believe the strain,
And few that listen, turn to hear again.
To gain him thus, man turns the ancient page,
Has poets measures and consults each age;
Turns to Parnossus—tempts the rising mount,
Hopes there to find it, at the inspiring fount;
And thus pursues, 'till in its rapid flight,
Time passes by—the dreamer's lost in night.
Hear how the warrior—drives his bloody car,—
And leads his armies into furious war—
Scales the high Alps or crosses o'er the Rhine,
Counts his full ranks and forms them into line;
On fame's fair sheet he writes his name in gore,
Nor deigns acknowledge greater chiefs of yore;

Dares the whole phalanx of a British crew,—
Unawed by numbers, though his force be few :—
Course now the shadow and see what cheering fame
Turns for the monarch or embalms his name ;—
Each strife for fame but adds a new distress—
Dies 'mid his foes, without a friend's caress.
Such is the course and such the fate attends,
On all who struggle for such trifling ends ;—
More wise is he who dwells secure from strife
And courts ambition in an humbler life.
Now to ambition, while I turn the page,
You'll learn the spirit of the present age,
Or in my numbers, as they chance in rhymes,
Find a fit image shaped for modern times.
On general grounds here may I hope to tread,
Untouched by party—where the patriots bred.
Range the fair field, and claim the good it pays,
Sit 'neath its bowers and listen to its lays.
To trace the impelling cause that moves the breast,
And shapes our wanderings to the East or West ;—
That gives the statesman struggling fires to feel—
Encircles Vulcan as he smites the steel—
Sways the main action in the unconscious mind—
Impells all nations—and lives through all time.
“Now call to mind what high capacious powers,”
The soul has hidden in her secret bowers ;
How far beyond the mists of this vain sphere
E'en the mind looks—but yet it struggles here ;
Looks to improvement ;—thirsts for learned lore,
And sighs for draughts that ne'er were quaffed before.
'Tis but ambition—Holy or unjust
Each thought e'er moves or gives to life a trust.
Each high emotion swells the soul again
Like kindling fuel feeds the raging flame ;—
E'en in expression dawns the gifted mind—
Commands the visage and reveals its kind ;
Through strange conceptions it betrays its fires
In kind emotions but suppressed desires.
Oft does ambition 'mid these damps of Earth,

'Neath climes ungenial turn to meaner worth;
 Swept by such fingers as mistake its lays
 The tones are discord and devoid of praise.
 Oft sensual pleasures lure the soul astray,
 Turn of the aim, and higher trusts betray;
 Hold in firm hands the noblest trusts of Heaven,
 E'er man hath fostered, or his author given.
 Such is the cast, and such the ruined way,
 Untaught ambition makes its wild display.
 Protect us then ye powers that rule above,—
 Promote our freedom and increase its love,—
 Or should ambition or desire of fame
 Rise in our breasts or e'er disturb its flame;
 Touch the faint kindlings with a proper zeal;
 O'er-whelm injustice and its laws repeal;
 Fly the first impulse that would poison life;
 The mind endanger, or engender strife;
 Hold the wild passions in submissive chains;
 Enlighten wisdom, and usurp the reins.
 Ask not my views of parties or of laws;
 Detain me not to urge sub-treasury flaws;
 Moneys or banks do not disturb my head—
 In humbler service, earn my daily bread.
 'Neath these few lines, in secret words confined,
 I've couched my motto, and revealed my mind;
 Search then with care these simple verses o'er,
 'Till you've found out what you have known before.
 Remember now—whilst other things we view—
 A day once gone; thus our number is made few;—
 The Leap Year's Day (perhaps we'll see no more)
 Indulge our hopes, and still increase our store;—
 One more kind wish;—may Heaven reward our care,
 Nor frowning fortune ever be our share.

On the Pleasure Ride

Having thus my story very near complete,
 Mr. My mind was driven from its lonely seat;—
 "Look here," said they with whom I sat to write, Enrapt in joy they come—they look so bright;—

- Miss Rise from your seat and come and see
 A happy number joined in perfect glee.
 Revived, I rose and walked across the floor—
 Looked through the window—saw eight, ten or more,
- Mr. Freed from all care—to pleasure alone they were Confined—all happy—all joyful—no sorrow there.
- Miss As thus I look whilst they were passing by Another thought occurred for me to write.
- Mr. So on I went with eager haste to say,
 Sigh not ye sons for this, Sir's, is the day;—
- Miss Vermillian cheeks or—affections by your sides,
 Keep clear of envy, and they'll become your brides;
- Mr. Along the way as now you choose your course
 Prepare yourselves for "better and for worse."
- Miss Mounted on horses all they were complete
 Conversant with the subject of this sheet;—
 Bright as the stars they on pursued their way,
- Mr. Partaking of the pleasures of the blissful day.
 But still that day was hastening to a close,
- Miss Long to be forgotten—and, as each one knows,
 Slept silent in oblivion, 'till other years
- Mr. Roll down the wave of time and again appears
 In forty-four. Thus passed the day we hail
 As in its fourthly annual course it sailed
- Miss On steady wing, and brought the scenes once passed,
 Again to view. But man's, poor mortal man's last
- Mr. Hour's at hand—with awe he meets his doom
 And, trembling, falls prostrate in a wating tomb.
- Miss "How lov'd, how honored once, avails him not,
 To whom related, or by whom forgot."

FINIS

Tender my best wishes to Jane, Cecelia, Mary and family, Robert, William, Thomas and their families, to Mary Gillit and family, and to all inquiring friends. Write soon. Accept yourselves the love and esteem of your son, —John W. Wheat.

MR. THOMAS WHEAT,

Jay Court House, Portland,

January 2.

Letter from John Wesley Wheat to his brother, Robert A. Wheat.

Taylorville, Ch. Co., Ill., May 7, 1845.

Dear Brother, Robert A. Wheat:

Your kind favor of———was duly received by me. But I have been neglecting to answer it in order to get a letter from Samuel, so that I might write further in relation to its contents. Your letter found us all well, and the news it contained was highly interesting to me. I was glad to learn that you had an idea of coming out to see this country soon. I would have been very much pleased to have seen Thomas and yourself out here. If you possess the requisite qualifications, you can get good wages for teaching school in this state. The law requires that teachers shall understand orthography, reading in English, penmanship, arithmetic, English grammar, modern geography, and the modern history of the United States, and he must be examined and receive a certificate of qualifications from the proper authorities before he can get employment as a teacher. I would be glad indeed if you would all sell out there and come out here. This country is more enticing in every particular than that is. But if father is not willing to remove to this state, I will be happy to see you or any of the family out here. Samuel stated in a letter which I received from him lately that he understood father to say that he intended to move to this community, and I will indeed be glad to see him come, if he does come at all.

Tell father for me that Samuel wrote me some time in February last, requesting me to assist him to come out here. He wrote that he had to make a living for himself—that he had left father finally (if I understood his letter aright)—that he was then going to school and thought himself capable of teaching a common school, and wished to come out here for that purpose. He wrote something also about learning the printing trade. I answered his letter and requested that he should consult father as to the propriety of his coming out here to teach school, or to learn that trade. I did not write him what qualifications the laws of this state require in order to teach a common school. I received another letter from him a few days since, in which he states that he saw father and conversed with him on the subject of coming out here, and also on the subject of learning the printing trade. He seemed anxious to come out here and desired me to furnish him with money to come with. I have not yet answered his letter, because I wish to know what father thinks about it. If he is qualified to teach the different branches required by our law, I will be happy to assist him to come and teach school here, but if he is not, I do not wish to encourage him to come for that purpose, though I shall be happy to see him or any of the others of my brothers or sisters out here, let the object of their visit be what it may. Write me in your next letter what father has to say about it.

I was particularly pleased with the elegant but simple style in which you called to my recollection those incidents of childhood, which are ever pleasing when we look back upon them. If I may be permitted, I will say in the language of another: "How dear to my heart are the scenes of my childhood. When fond recollections present them to view. The ORCHARD, the meadow, the deep tangled wildwood. And every loved spot which my infancy knew."

You say something about my neglecting to address a letter personally to each one of my connection, and old acquaintances. Should any of them think me negligent in that respect, they have no just ground for thinking so. Although I think it due to myself to occupy my time and attention with something more elevated and more useful than cracking "BUTTER-NUTS", yet, I, by no means, am so puffed up with notions of my own greatness as to forget my old acquaintances, and to think and write of none but Governors or Presidents' wisdom, as I conceive consists in adapting ones self to the situation in which they are placed, yet, at the same time, I think it to be every man's duty to occupy as respectable a station in society as he consistently can, provided he does not get so high as to forget his kin and old acquaintances. When I address a letter there, it is my desire that every one considers it as addressed to them, for it is my wish that all that desire shall see it, so that one will do all, for

I have something to do besides writing letters. I am teaching school in this place now and have been teaching about five weeks. I engaged for six months, at $18.00 per month.

We are all well at this time. Write soon.

Yours,

JOHN WESLEY WHEAT.

Letter From John Wesley Wheat's Widow.

Santa Fe, N. M.

September 19, 1845.

Dear Parents:

With pleasure I embrace the present opportunity of writing. I am well and have enjoyed very good health ever since I commenced this march. We arrived in Santa Fe on the fifteenth afternoon—a march of fifty-six days—a distance of nearly one thousand miles, and that to over an entire plain destitute of timber, with the exception of a few wandering trees along the water-courses.

Christian County, Illinois,

January 28, 1846.

Dear Father and Mother:

With great pleasure that I write you a few lines. As to my health at present, I am in better health at this time than I have been for some time. Hoping that these few lines may find enjoying the same blessing. I stated that was a source of happiness to right You the good health I enjoyed, but the painful news you have to hear that which almost breaks my heart. On the 30th of September last, my dear husband died in Santa Fe of Bilious fever. I am left alone to mourn the loss of a good husband and companion and Your dear son he was well attend beried vary neat, which was a great source of comfort to me. I would be glad to see you was it convenient for me to do so, but I have no chance of coming to that country. I am left alone. If I have any chance, I would come and see you and stay a while with You. When You receive this letter right to me and let me here from you all and how all are. This letter was commenced by my dear husband to his parents before he died in Santafe. The gentleman that waited on him sent me this letter in the one he rote to me. He lay sicke for afue days only. He was out of his head for forty eight hours before he died. I have administrated his property. It may pay the debts. His name is to a good many notes as security. I would like You could come out. I would go home with you. So I remain You loving daughter until death, so farewell.

Letter of Robert Augustus Wheat to His Father and Mother.

Miamitown, Ohio.
March 6, 1849.

Father:

I rec'd your letter today and was glad to hear that you were all well at home. I have just got home from the circuit.

I did expect to have been home before this time, but have been prevented by a series of protracted meetings, which commenced thirteen weeks ago. The first J. Judys Class, which lasted nearly three weeks, forty-four joined the church. The second we held in Germantown, which lasted four weeks—forty-three joined. The third, in Miltonville, continued sixteen days—fifty-four joined. The fourth, at J. H. Kinps & J. Emericks. It has been in progress two weeks. Twenty-four have joined and it is still going on. Three-fourths or more that have joined the church have got religion, a great many that were in the church before have just experienced religion. I intend to come home as soon as I can. I have not had time to settle myself as yet, about the first or second week in April I now think I will try and be there. Your request for help I should be glad if I could do it, and will as much as I can I would rather you would not sell the colt 'till I come if you are not in danger of suffering in any way. It is in your hands to do the very best with it for yourself and me that you can. I expect you to manage and take care of the farm as yours. I herein enclose Five Dollars as you requested. Our love to you all. We are all well.

Note—The above letter was addressed as follows:

MR. THOMAS WHEAT,
Portland, Jay County,
Indiana.

Sermon written by Robert A. Wheat in 1841.

“When God chose the Isralites for his own people he gave them Laws. Ist General Laws, that related to their behavior as men which laws belong to all mankind. God spake them from Mount Sinia with thunder and lightening then wrote them for them on two tablets of stone. These laws not only declare the duty of every man, but the exclusive privilege of every man to love and serve his God.

2. Special Laws, about the worship of their God about their priests their sacrifices and ordinances and about holy times and holy places—these laws were to keep them as a church from the idolatry and evil customs of other nations and to figure out the church of Christ in the world.

3. Peculiar Laws, to distinguish them from all other nations as Gods own people. God gave them such particular rules about these common things about their families their houses and lands their servants their lives their limbs their peace and wars to show them that he was their King to govern them as well as their God to worship.

That we cannot sin with impunity is a matter determined—for that penal consequences are attached to offences is not a subject of argument. It is a principle therefore already established that the authority of God must be preserved in all government and that in that kind of government or administration which restrains evil by penalty and encourages obedience by favor and hope.

The creatures governed are one of the interested parties. For a government which admits no forgiveness would sink the guilty to despair. A government which never punishes offence is a contradiction it cannot exist. Not to punish is to dissolve authority. To punish without mercy is to destroy and when all are guilty the distinction would be universal. The Ruler of the world is not careless of the conduct of His creatures. The reason which compel Him to maintain His authority do not terminate in Himself. He is a party against offenders for the sake of the Moral order of the universe to which sin if encouraged by a negligent administration or by entire or even frequent impunity would be the source of endless disorder and misery. How plain it is that the relief of offending man from future punishment and his restoration to the divine favor ought for the interests of mankind themselves and for the instruction and caution of other beings to be so bestowed that no licence shall be given to offence that God himself while He manifest His compassion He appears no less just or less holy than His efficient and even lawful authority requires. That disobedience to His commands and a noncompliance of what He requires of transgressors shall as truly though not so unconditionally subject us to the deserved penalty as though no hope of forgiveness had been exhibited. The necessary conditions are developed in the New Testament. Necessary they are unless we contend for a licence and an impunity which shall annul the efficient government of the universe, a point which no reasonable man will contend for. If it be said that sin must be pardoned in the exercise of the divine prerogative the reply is that if this prerogative were exercised towards a part of mankind only the part by the others cannot be reconciled to the divine character and if the benefit were extended to all, government would be at an end. Were this principle to regulate human governments every criminal would escape and Judicial forms would become a subject for ridicule. If repentance alone could secure pardon then all must be pardoned and government dissolved as in the case of forgiveness by the exercise of mere prerogative. If a selection be made then different and discordant principles of government are introduced into the divine administration which cannot be maintained. To add reformation to repentance and restrain forgiveness to those only who to their penitence add a course of future obedience. But a change of conduct does not any more than repentance repair the mischief of former conduct. Even in this world we see that the sobriety of the reformed man does not always restore health and the industry and economy of the formerly negligent and wasteful repair not the losses of extravagance this theory involves a contradiction to all the principles of government established among men which in flagrant cases never suspends punishment in anticipation of a change of conduct but in the infliction of penalty look steadily to the crime actually committed and to the necessity of vindicating the violated majesty of the laws. How may mercy be extended to offending creatures the subjects of the divine government without encouraging vice by lowering the righteous and holy character of God and the authority of His government in the maintenance of which the whole universe of beings are interested is one of the most important and difficult questions which can employ the human mind. None of the theories which have been opposed to Christianity afford a solution of the problem. The only answer is found in the Holy Scriptures. They alone show and indeed they alone profess to show how God may be just and yet the Justifier of the ungodly. Other schemes show how he may be merciful but the difficulty does not lie there. Christianity meets it by declaring "the righteousness of God at the same time proclaims His mercy." The free gift and voluntary sufferings of an incarnate Divine person "for us" to magnify the justice of God display His hatred to sin proclaim the exceeding sinfulness of sin by the deep and painful sufferings of the Son of God.

Samuel James Wheat's Letters to His Father and Mother

Middletown, Ohio,
June 9, 1846.

Dear Father and Mother, Thomas and Hannah Wheat:

I rejoice at having the privilege again to present to you another letter in order to let you know the condition that your son is in. I am well at present and feel in fine spirits. Your letter that I received gave much satisfaction in relation to your affairs and the condition of the family. It pleased me very much to see Jane's writing and how much she has improved since I was there. As for Cecelia, you did not say much about her, only she was going to school in Portland. I am not going from this place yet, but do not know how soon I may be called away in the service of my country. There has been a call for volunteers, and there has been a great many volunteered their services and have been at me for to go with them, and I have told them that I will go if General Taylor should want any more than what he has now, and I stand ready at any time, and, Father, if I should go, do not be any ways alarmed about it. If it should be the case, I will write a letter to you the day that I start. Mother, don't let this grieve you, for you know that our forefathers had to suffer, and I will tell you I will write. I would rather suffer in the field of battle than to be kept under the yoke of bondage all the days of my life. When I first heard the news, the very blood itself boiled within my veins against our enemies. Although I have set in to work for the man that I live with, by the month, nevertheless I am ready at a moment's warning to prepare for the seat of battle. The Governor of this state has issued his proclamation, and he says in it that Ohio must forthwith send her share of men.

I always did like to hear from home and how my relations are getting along. I would like to see you all once more, but, if the good Lord spares my life, I will see first if he sees proper to call me from time to eternity. I am ready and prepared to go at any time. Mother, my thoughts often linger back to your house, and I have often wished that I could be there just one day to talk with you. It appears to me I can see the things there as plain as if I was right in among them, but time will change all things. I am in somewhat of a hurry and cannot take time to write in a polished hand. You write as soon as you can, and let me know your minds on the subject. I will write more in my next. I still remain your son until death.

SAMUEL JAMES WHEAT.

Note—The above letter was addressed to Thomas Wheat, Esq., Portland, Jay County, Indiana. Post mark, but no stamp or envelope.

Middletown, Butler County, Ohio.

Thomas Wheat, Dear Father:

I take the pleasure to inform you that I felt very well satisfied of hearing from you and family. I received your letter, dated November 15, informing me of your's and the family's health and also the prosperity of the church, and you stated in it also about my finding the family all well and you wanted to know whose family, (why my family). I found Jacob Antrum's family all well. I have worked my time out with Mr. Kemp, and I have not received pay yet from him, but have turned the account on a debt, so that it settled and all of my other debts are settled up too, so I can say that I am square with the world and so act independent of the world. Since I worked for Mr. Kemp, I have worked a month for Mr. James Clark for eight dollars, and he offers me ten dollars a month for six months to come or a good horse, saddle and bridle furnished to my hand at the expiration of the time, and, looking at the chance of obtaining a team there or getting a horse from Robert, is a doubtful case, and to run in debt for one. I am not going to do it. When I commence farming for myself, I shall be clear of debt or any incumbrance. So I think you will have to rent the place to someone else for the next season, but, before the time of sowing your grain next fall, you let me know something about the affairs there. I have seen Robert several times, and I understand that he is to hold a Quarterly Meeting in Germantown next Saturday and Sunday. So, perhaps, I will get to see him again. As for Benjamine, I know nothing of him. Tell the girls that I will bring, when I come out, a fashionable bonnet apiece. They cost fifty cents apiece. They are good and warm during the winter.

I still remain your son, etc.,

SAMUEL JAMES WHEAT.

Mr. Wheat, My Dear Sir:

There is a young man here by the name of Samuel Wheat who says you are his father. He is very sick with inflammation of the lungs. We think it probable he will not live long, but rather that he may die soon. Therefore, come immediately after this reaches you. He has been sick about a week, and has been a good deal delirious. Come and see him. He is now in quite limited circumstances pecuniarily. If you cannot come, write immediately.

Yours truly,
H. Z. GILL, M.D.

Letters and Manuscripts of Benjamine P. Wheat to His Father and Mother

Enon, Clark County, Ohio,
June 19, 1847.

Mr. Thomas Wheat.

Dear Father and Mother:

I received your favor of May the third and was glad to find you all as healthy as you are. Sickness is the common lot of mortals, and we are all liable to death. Mary's health seems on the decline, which I am sorry to hear. We are all as well as common at this time. We buried our Little Benjamine, a fine, chubby boy, sixteen months old. He was sick ten hours with croup. He died and was buried while I was away on my circuit. He died November 6 last. As to my business, of which you wrote, I don't know what I could do to better it. If any thing can be done, I give you full power to act as my agent in any of those cases, but not to incur any cost. I have paid all the cost on these things I intend to. If they had let me alone, they would have had their pays all by this time, but my property was taken out of my hands and I thrown out of business. Now they (my creditors) have it, they must do the best they can with it if Bonine lays no claim to the house and lots. If you can by his or his attorney's consent, sell it and pay off his mortgage and my notes, do it. I would like to hear of all being settled up and squared off, but I can't do it and save that property. They must take it. It is all I can give. It is like sending a man to Hell to pay the very last mite when it will never come. As to my leaving the Brethren Church, I think you have heard something wrong. It commenced at Autts Greenville circuit, and, at that time, you say you would not have blamed me if I had left, but, since you say I acknowledged I was in an error and was sorry for it. This was the first I heard of that. I said I was sorry I had said anything about Masonry, as it had created such an excitement, but did not say I was in an error. But I said further that I would sacrifice all my interests in the Masonic institution for the interest of the church. I did not attend with them or violate the Discipline and thought all would be as usual. But, at Annual Conf., it was brought up again, and I was sent before a committee (I find no fault with that), and then all proving fair, the malignant spirit of Anti-Masonry prompted some to commence a course of persecution. Had it been in their power, I think they would have hung me for being contrary to their wish. A resolution was presented to Conf. that I should be required to give a pledge to Conf. of my future conduct upon that subject. It was pressed on two days and the Conference put it down. The third day, it was brought up again and passed. I arose and inquired what pledge I should give and was told, "To say nothing about Masonry." What; a body of Christian ministers in the U. S. A. take the liberty of speech from one whose father fought in the last war for it; NO, NEVER. I waited one whole year for my brethren to think upon the subject and went to the Conference expecting some one would have stood up in my defense, but there were none. I thought discipline was enough for me as any of the rest, without an extra judicial law for my case and that law made by an annual Conference, which had no power to make laws. When the resolution was before the house, I called for a trial, if I had violated discipline, but it was said, "Brother Wheat, we have nothing against you. We want to pass this resolution for your good." The resolution was, in my estimation, uncalled for, and, during last year, I conversed with Brother George Bonebrake, Brother Hoop and, at the Conference, with Brother William Nall, who was the mover of the resolution, and told my feelings and what I thought was the design of the resolution—to try and destroy my influence in the Conference. When I went to the last Conference, I went in hopes that all would be made right, but I was not healed nor modified with an ointment or bound up. And, when I left and went home, it festered in my bosom, and I thought if the Conference can take this liberty unauthorized by discipline, once they can again, and I can be harranged time and again for the same thing, and I deliberately joined the M. E. Church. But I, this day, think more of the United Brethren Church rules (excepting that anti-Masonic spirit) than any Church rules I know of. I have since that time went clear through the Masonic institution. I have nothing against it.

Your son,
BENJAMINE P. WHEAT.

Father and Mother:

I think you might come and see us. Make your calculations and come and stay all next winter. It shan't cost you any thing. I would like for mother to get out of the woods once more before she leaves us. Give our respects to all who may inquire after us, and those who do not. I yet remember my old neighbors, and many of them I esteem and love. Tell Joseph and Mary to come and see us.

Letters from Benjamine P. Wheat, and his wife and daughters, to Cecelia and Jane E. Wheat.

Lewisburg, Preble County, Ohio,
December 16, 1848.

Dear Aunts:

We are all well at present, and hope you are the same. We moved to Lewisburg in November last. I felt very much lost for some time after leaving all my associates, but I have become acquainted with some few, and I like them very well. Our Quarterly Meeting commenced the second and third of this month, and it has been a glorious meeting. We had speaking meeting every day. The meeting broke on the eleventh. There have been six conversions. Grandfather knows how large Enon is, and this is about the same size. We live close to the Meeting House. Fathers Collegue is a young preacher—this being his first year in the Conference. I think he does very well. His name is Joseph Blackburn. When grandfather was out to see us, we were preparing to go to the Conference, and, the same day that he left (which was Wednesday), mother was taken sick. She had three chills, which made her very sick, and, when father came home, he gave her some medicine, so that by Friday she was able to sit up. We started that afternoon, and got to Columbus the next day, where we found our friends well except Cousin Man, who had just recovered from a spell of sickness. We staid there three days, and visited the prison and the lunatic assylum. At the assylum, there were objects of pity, but the state's prison was a gloomy and terrible place. There were 400 males and nine females. The females we were not allowed to see. I will describe the prison to you as near as I can. The wall is about forty feet high and all the buildings are stone. There are all kinds of mechanics. They live on corn bread in the summer and wheat bread in the winter. While passing through the houses, my attention was not drawn particularly until we came to the weave house, where there was a little boy only 19 years old, with a prisoner's cap on as if he had committed some crime. On inquiring to know the cause, we learned that he had broken into a house and attempted to steal. Father thought that they might have gotten along without putting him there, for now he was ruined as long as he lives; his character is gone. But I must proceed and tell you about our cousins, at or near Newark. They were all well. I did not know that I had so many until I went to see them. There are five grown. I received a letter the ninth from one of them. He says they are all well. Come and see us next summer and make a visit, and see where we live, and what we look like. I could tell you many things if you were here that I cannot write. Give my love to all my friends. Write soon and let me know how you are getting along; how Uncle Joseph's family is. Grandfather said they had the ague. I remain your affectionate niece,

EMILY WHEAT.

Jane E. Wheat and Hannah C. Wheat.
Dear Friend:

I thought I would write a few lines and inform you that Father Gillit is dead. I received a letter, dated October 29, from Brother John, stating that father died September 29.

Dear girls, I have to say that I am left without father or mother, and far from any relatives except my family. I think if I live 'till spring, I will come out there and see you, for we are some nearer than we was in Enon. Father, one of Mr. Ethan Pire's daughters lives here. She remembered you and family very well; has heard you preach and has been to your house. Her father lives in Iowa. I will close, so farewell,

LUCY H. WHEAT.

Dear Aunt: I think as mother and Emily have written you a letter and it is not quite full, I will try to write you a few lines, but I should be much better pleased if I could see you and talk with you. We are not going to school now. Father teaches us at home. Emily and I are studying arithmetic, geography and grammar, and Joseph is reading in the Fourth Reader. Come out and see us if you can next summer. I was so small, or rather young, when I saw you that I have no recollection of you. I send my best respects to you and all of my friends. Write to us soon and let us know how you are getting along. I remain your affectionate niece,

EMILINE WHEAT.

H. C. Wheat and Jane E. Wheat.

Here is a half sheet that might as well have something on it, and, as the girls began on the other side and missed this, I will accept it. I write to all without naming any. I have concluded to move to my circuit, and have consequently moved to Lewisburg, as I was appointed to Lewisburg Circuit by the last Ohio Annual Conference. I have lost my horse since I came here. It laid down and died. I now have none. I am not yet able to buy one. We are all well but Lucy. You know, she is not very bad and will be better or worse some of these days. Emily begins to think sometimes that she is a young woman. I suppose most people know how young women act (that's her), but she is a very good gal. Emiline, I don't know what to say about her. She is neither a little gal nor a big one—about a betwenity, half girl, half woman—but does tolerably well for her. Joseph is as slim as a shite poke and learns very fast, but don't like his books very well, but I think he is gaining on that. I am trying to prepare for my examination at Conference on divinity, grammar, geography and composition, but I find I am as dumb as a beetle and cannot learn half as fast as I could eighteen or twenty years ago, but I intend to go it. Now more serious. We have had some excellent meetings already this Conference year. Sixteen have joined the church and about ten conversions upon the circuit altogether. Give my respects to Joseph and Mary. Tell them Father Gillitt is no more—he died of apoplexy, but was willing to die and go home, where friends meet again and never part no more. But, as without holiness, no man shall see the Lord. Therefore, holiness is the path to Heaven. And, in Jesus Christ, we alone find that holiness. Therefore, if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature; old things are passed away, and, behold, all things have become new. We want the girls to find all the grammatical and rhetorical errors in these pieces—except mother's, and she don't pretend to be a scholar, but the rest do, and send them back in your letter, and adieu,

B. P. WHEAT,

Note—All of the above letters, 1, 2, 3 and 4, were written on one sheet of paper, folded, without envelope, sealed with a paper seal, no stamp, and, on the outside, the letter was addressed as follows:

MISS HANNAH CECELIA WHEAT,

Jay C. H.,

Lewisburg, Ohio.

Jay County, Ia.

December 16.

Portland, Jay County, Indiana,

February 12, 1848.

Mr. Charles Patterson:

Dear Sir:

I am under painful necessity of announcing to you the death of your dear mother. She died the first day of February, at 11:00 o'clock in the evening. The circumstances of her death is as follows: The third day of January, she took a severe attack of the apoplexy and, by the assistance of medical aid, she apparently got better on Monday. The last day of the month, Cecilia found her behind the corn crib helpless and speechless. The doctor was called in and she appeared to get better; continued so until Tuesday morning, when she took the last fit, which terminated her earthly existence. Although we have great reason to mourn the loss of her, yet our loss is her eternal gain, for she died in full faith of the Gospel of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. She was a woman of deep piety, her suffering was great, but they are over and she has entered into that rest that remains for the people of God. As to her virtues and fidelity in her different departments of her life, I need not comment, for they are well known to you. She was fifty-seven years, eleven months and five days old. As you had not the pleasure of seeing her for many years, I herein send to you a little of her hair, that you may have some idea of her looks. Farewell.

A pen word on the matter: When John W. Wheat was at your house on his way to Mexico, you commenced to send us your paper and it was a welcome message. We received three numbers and it stopped. Why, we don't know. John informs us that the reason it stopped before was the postmaster informed you that no such people lived here. We still live in Jay County, Indiana, and I think will continue to live here. In your communications to us, direct them to Jay County Court House, Jay County, Indiana; then they will not miss. There is another Portland in the State of Indiana—it is information. We are all well at present—that is all at home. I am at home at present, with Cecilia and Jane, your two youngest sisters, whom you have never seen. Robert A. Wheat makes his home here, but is away now on his circuit—in Ohio. The last heard from B. Wheat and family, all were well. Thomas T. and William R. Wheat and families are well. Mary McClelland and family are well. Have not heard from John since he left Fort Leavenworth. Samuel J. Wheat, the last I heard, he was in Louisiana. He informed me that he was coming to see you this spring. I wish you would come to see us as soon as convenient. No more at present, and I remain your step-father in the bonds of love. February 12, 1848.

THOMAS WHEAT.

Dear Brother:

I sit down for the first time in my life to scribble to you. You are as a stranger to me, but, although I never saw you, yet you seem to me as near as a brother, for I have heard mother talk so much about you, but she is no more. She has gone to her long sought home, but father has said enough about this. I would like you to pay us a visit if convenient. I expect if I live and keep my health, I shall take a trip to see you and go to New York. Our family is very small. Father and Jane and I are all there are at home. I have to take mother's place in keeping house. Write and let us know all the particulars about your family, for it is so long since we have had any correspondence. Nothing more at present.

Yours affectionately,

HANNAH C. WHEAT.

Charles.

Dear Brother:

I take my pen in hand to inform you that I am well and to let you know that our friends and relations are the same, except Cousin Wilbur Morehous is very sick and is not expected to live. Cousin Susan Ann sends her best love to you and your family, and says that she would like to see you and talk with you about your childhood. They want you to write to them. The last we heard of Grandmother Patterson, she was about the same, seemingly as could be expected. Uncle Robert was well the last we heard from them. I send my love to you and your family. My pen is bad; my ink is pale.

Your affectionate sister,

JANE ELIZA WHEAT.

To Charles Patterson and Family,
Lexington, Mo.

Williamsburg, Clermont County, Ohio, 1851.

Mr. Charles Patterson.

Dear Brother:

I have not heard from you for a long time. The last I heard, you had received a severe wound from a broken bottle, and had not been able to labor for some time, but you were recovering. I have been very anxious to hear from you and your family. You directed your papers and letters to Bethony P. O., in Butler County, Ohio. But now direct them to Williamsburg, Clermont County, Ohio. I am placed in Williamsburg circuit this year. We had about forty miles to move; we are now twenty-eight miles east of Cincinnati. An omnibus goes in and out every day. If you should come to the city, come and see us, it would be a pleasant ride. My daughter, Emily, is still going to her school in Cincinnati. She will graduate this year (June next) if she lives. I intend then to send my other daughter to the same school. My boys are both well and growing finely. Joseph is 12, and George is going on four years old. I am as corpulent as ever. I only weigh 262 pounds avoirdupois. I ride mostly in a sulky. I have been thinking of moving to Iowa or Missouri. But I don't know now whether I ever shall. It will take three years besides this to finish the girls' education. Then my boys will come on and I have bought a scholarship right in the Alleghany College, at Meadville, in Pennsylvania, and I think I shall stay here until they are all educated, if we live. (I have a perpetual scholarship.)

Our Sister Hannah Cecelia died last spring (May 17) of consumption. She had been married about one year; had one child, which also died before its mother. She was resigned and willing to die. Jane Eliza, our youngest sister, is married and doing very well. She married a Mr. Hearn. If you write to her, direct to Portland, Jay County. Mary is still living in Winchester, Randolph County, Indiana. She married a lawyer, and, I believe, is doing well. She has two children living.

Our youngest brother (Samuel) is living. He is not very smart; seems to have no tact for doing business. He is a hard working fellow and makes himself a good living. He is not married. Father is well. He has been traveling a circuit for two years past in the Methodist Protestant Church. He has married a widow lady, about a year ago (maybe I wrote this once before;). Out of our large family, there is but a few left; most are dead, and you and I will soon follow. It struck my mind very forcibly when I heard of your accident, that it was a warning to you to take up your cross again in the church. You once did belong to Church and enjoyed yourself in Religion. This life will soon pass. We struggle year after year, anticipating some future good. We, as Pope says, "Never ARE but always TO BE blest." Thus we push on until we die, "Tithing mint and cummin and annis, and leaving the weightier matters of the law undone."

Write soon and let us hear how you are getting along with your wounds and how you are getting on with your business. I saw some notices in your paper, intimating that you were somewhat crowded by buying your new power press. I wrote to Uncle John Patterson, but have received no answer. Aunt Polly and Susanna and her husband were well the last I heard of them. I would like, very well, if you would send me your paper. The children thought a great deal of getting Uncle Charles' paper. It only came about one year. If you send it, you may send it to Williamsburg, Clermont County, Ohio. We will be here probably two years, from the tenth of this month.

Crops of wheat and oats and grass are all unusually good here, but corn and potatoes and buckwheat are not over half crops. Our elections are closely contested. We have not had full returns, but think that the Whigs will carry the state. We think, in the Presidential election, that Scott will carry this state.

Yours,

BENJAMINE P. WHEAT.

From the agitation in and out of Congress, upon the subject of slavery in the United States, many of our citizens are beginning to fear that if our glorious republic, with its civil and religious institutions is ever destroyed and that slavery will be the cause. Hence, most of our Northern people, in their sentiments, are what is termed Free Soilers; that is, we are willing that these states which have slaves now should keep them, but not to make any more slave states out of our territories. And, also, that the slave trading from one state to another is, in our view, the same as the African slave trade, which we all now condemn. We object to the institution for these two general reasons, among many others. Our civil and religious liberties depend upon the liberty of the press and the freedom of speech, all over, all the states; South as well as North, out of Congress as well as in. Now these two indispensable requisites are both cut off. Wherever slavery exists, you may say that the laws of the slave states prohibit free discussion, and we should abide by the state's laws. That is what we complain of. No legislative body has a right to make unjust, or prohibitory laws. No one does in the states where slavery exists discuss the wrong of slavery or of slave laws, so that there is no hope of reform, and the South would even prohibit us in the North from discussing these subjects if they could. Another point is the prohibiting the circulation of papers or books against slavery. They are soon abated as unreasonable. I love our whole Union.

BENJAMINE P. WHEAT.

Williamsburg,
August 17, 1853.

Dear Grandfather:

In haste, I write to you. We have not heard from any of you since Samuel was in the city to see me. When he first went out to see you, he took father and mother and little George's likeness to show you, but promised most faithfully to bring them the first time he came back; he did not do so. Now, grandfather, I want you to get them, and send or have them taken to Muncie or Andersontown. You know where both places are, and leave them with the postmaster, and we can get them, as a friend of ours will be traveling through there soon, and will call for them, at the postoffice. Please answer immediately, and let us know which of the above named places you will leave them. I cannot say when we will come out to see you, as father is kept so busy all the time, but he talks that if we do not move again this fall, of going to New York on business, and he wants these pictures to take along, to show the folks. We are well. Our Camp meeting begins the 26th of this month, about three miles from here. We anticipate a good time. Our Conference is held in Hillsborough in September. Wrap the two cases of likenesses up in paper and write on the outside, when you leave them with the postmaster, "To be given to Dr. T. W. Forshee." If you do not, he will not know who to give them to, or when the right one calls. Write by the next mail and tell us where you will leave them, that we can send word for the doctor to call and get them.

Give our best respects to all our friends. I shall look for an answer very, very soon.

Your affectionate granddaughter,

EMILY A. WHEAT,

Daughter of Benjamin P. Wheat.

Georgetown, Brown County, Ohio,

April 7, 1854.

Dear Sister and Brother McClelland:

I have not written to you for some time. I think I ought too now, so, without any further apologies, I will do so. I have been afflicted for about ten days in a peculiar manner. A severe pain commenced in my right foot, in the instep. It continued getting worse for five days. I thought my foot would burst, but, by continuing in irritating poultices, the pain has been stopped, and I now can walk on my foot again. Lucy is the same old Lucy, not well, but about. Emily graduated last June, and has been teaching school for six months. She is tolerably well. Expects to marry next fall. Her beau's name is "Forshee", a doctor. He graduated in the Medical College in Cincinnati this last winter. (He is of the Alopathick, or Old School.) He has been practicing medicine since he took his first course, about five years. She thinks she is going to do well. He is a fine looking man. All I regret is he is a widower, and has two children, a son and daughter. Considerable of an undertaking to become a step-mother. We have enough to raise our own children, but she thinks she can come it.

Emaline has been sick more or less for a year (dyspepsia). We are trying to cure her. Sometimes we think she is getting better, and then she gets worse. She is now able to walk about and do some light work. She has lost one year in college, for she was ready to go last fall, but did not until the last of January, stayed about three weeks, and came home sick, and been so (as above) ever since. Joseph and George are both hearty and well. Joseph will be 14 years old in August. George was 5 in March last. We are now living at the county seat of Brown

County. This is in the midst of the old military lands. And the titles, being so unsafe, retarded the prosperity of the country very much, but some later laws giving title, especially in these cases. After so long, peaceable possession has helped the matter, and it is becoming a fine country. At Fayetteville, in this county, there is a Roman Catholic Church and near it a nunery, and they have bought land and intend to build a monkery near by. Then the monks and nuns will be close together.

There is a large section of country near the town of Fayetteville owned nearly all by the Catholics. We are here, about eight miles from the Ohio River. To come here, come up the Ohio to Ripley and then stop to come here. Lucy and I went to York State last fall, by the railroad. We went through in less than a day from Cincinnati. Her father and mother are both dead. We visited with all her brothers and sisters back there, except James. We did not, for want of time, go to see him. I was at Uncle John Patterson's, and stayed one night. He is the same Uncle John yet. Their children are nearly all grown to be men and women. Two of them are married, or were then. The rail track lies through the old barn yard. You would not know that country. Those hills are mostly cleared up and those pine plains have become fruitful fields. Our old place, at or below Adison, is owned now by Edsell Jones and his brother. They have the old Cherry place and all that bend in the river. They were building a new house just back of the old one. I could see the old house and the old well as we passed by. The railroad runs by L. A. Jones's and down by the saw mill, at the broken bridge. But enough.

BENJAMINE P. WHEAT.

Ups and Downs of Benjamine Wheat's Itinerancy

(Printed in the Religious Telescope, in the fall of 1846. Related by his Granddaughter, Laura Wheat Foster.)

The following stories have been told us many times by our Father Joseph. Soon after their arrival in Indiana and before their log cabin was finished, grandfather started out on the circuit to visit a sick person or preach a funeral sermon. Grandmother was left with her baby and her sister-in-law in the cabin, without any door or windows. They hung a blanket over the door opening. Grandmother heard wolves howling close to the cabin and arose and built up the fire, hoping the sight and smell of the fire would keep them from coming closer. But they came and looked in around the blanket at the door. Then she began throwing burning pieces of wood at them, which her sister-in-law would hand to her as she guarded the doorway, and, in this way, kept the wolves out 'till daylight came and they went off into the forest. A neighbor came that day and, when told of the wolves, asked if they had any fresh meat about the place, and grandmother remembered that they had a quarter of venison in the loft, which some other neighbors had given them the day before. They were better prepared to keep the wolves out before another night.

Another time, when grandfather was out on the circuit, they ate up all the food they had and had no money to buy more. (Grandmother had been doing sewing for others and earned a little that way to help buy food.) So, when it was time for supper, she had the family kneel for prayers, and she prayed for food and clothing and fuel to take care of her children with. One of the church members came on some errand and heard the prayers and did not let them know he was there. He went away and saw other members and people in the community, and the family was soon well supplied with food, fuel, and clothing. I have found in an old scrap-book an article written by my grandfather in the fall of 1846, which so vividly pictures the life of a circuit rider that I shall copy it

"Lights and Shades of Itinerancy. Left home September 16; rode twenty-two miles; preached at Brother L's, at 3 p. m., to an attentive and weeping congregation. Held class—the Lord was present indeed. Rode four miles; preached at Brother S's; 'a shout of a King in a camp.' Rode seven miles and preached at Brother C's, but few present; neighborhood full of sectarian prejudice. Rode to Brother W's; had a good time; here a messenger overtook me—wife very sick, wanted at home immediately; rode day and night to get home; found her poorly, but by good medical attention, convalescent. Prepared to return to A's; wife took worse, had to remain at home six weeks before I could leave. Found that sickness in a preacher's family is hard to endure. Others can go to the barn, or bureau, or meat-tub, but it's hard to go where there is nothing to go to, run in debt, and trust to charity. (Churches and charity), to pay it: 'that is.' 'Well, brother, you have a hard time in this world; it is true; we all feel for you, but then you will get your pay in another world.' This is that on which a preacher's family must live, while he himself may literally 'grow fat and kick like Jeshuran.'

"Left home November 5; traveled round; arrived within thirteen miles of home and heard that Benjamine, my son, had been buried seven days. Sitting by the fire at Brother B's, one inquired the health of my family, 'So far as I know, all are well,' I say. 'You buried one about a week ago, did you not?' This was the first I had heard of it. A kind of trembling got hold of me, described by Habakuk: 'When I heard, my belly trembled, my lips quivered at the voice, rottenness entered into my bones, and I trembled in myself. On inquiry, I found a messenger had been after me. I came home with mingled hope and fear, stopped at the gate, my eldest daughter came to meet me. At first, she smiled, but, before she got to me, burst into tears, but said nothing. I could hear weeping in the house—came in; Benjamin was gone. I shall never see him 'till the graves give up their dead. I left him playful, took him in my arms and kissed him, which was the last. 'Even so, Father, for so it seemeth good in Thy sight.' I find I need more religion to bear all this with patience. And then our paper stopped coming about the same time, to add to our grief, but so it must be, because our General Conference said so. A traveling preacher must be at his appointments. (Sickness alone excepted), even if he should become 'worse than an infidel and deny the faith'; hard to live as some of our Western itinerants have to—furnish his own equipage, and then get three or four, sometimes five or six, dollars per month to support a large family, and this principally toward the year's end. Wife and children looking like some drunkard's family, bare-footed, bare-headed, and almost bare-backed, and how they live and what they eat is hard to tell. Does God require this of any man? Does He require a man to serve the Church and not the Church to serve him in turn? The word of God says: 'Give thyself wholly to these things that they profiting may appear to all'; and to the Church, 'The laborer is worthy of his hire', and 'thou shall not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn,' and to both, 'And if you receive our spiritual things, it is a great matter that we receive your carnal things'."

The New Parsonage.

(Written and read at the Dedication of the new Parsonage at Marshalltown, Iowa, January 13, 1887, by Laura Emmeline Wheat Cooley, daughter of Benjamin P. and Lucy Hunt Gillett Wheat.)

We've built a bran new parsonage and finished it complete
From cellar floor to gabled roof 'tis elegant and neat;
I say we built it for I wish to have it understood
I like to claim a partnership in everything that's good.
It has no massive granite walls or fine mosaic floor,
It boasts no gothic window nor richly carven door,
But plain and strong it stands, I'm sure we did the best we could,
It has a rock foundation, the rest is built of wood.

God's wood. The trees he planted by river, hill and plain;
He warmed them with His summer sun and watered them with rain;
And smiled, as looking through the years where human sight is dim
He saw we'd take this very wood and give it back to Him.
He knew how weak our best attempts and that we could not do
The smallest part in building this, unless He helped us through;
And so He built the strata beds long centuries ago,
And laid the rocky masses, there, to crystallize and grow.

He fixed the belts of iron ore with strength that never fails,
And taught us how to work it into bolts, and bars, and nails.
These rooms and walls and steady floors a mighty power declare;
We hear the echo of His love down every hall and stair.
Our willing hands, most feeble were, until He helped us through;
He gave us what to build it with and taught us how to do.
We meant to build this house for God, but it is surely fair
To give Him greatest credit, for he did the largest share.

There was another dear old house which graced this cherished spot;

Although we've taken it away, 'twill never be forgot.

It might have once been handsome when Marshalltown was young,

And may have seemed quite brilliant, the lesser lights among.

It made no great pretensions, but sometimes 'tis the way,

Those things are found most worthy which make the least display.

At least we know its modest walls re-echoed many a prayer,

And many a tender song went up upon the evening air.

And hopes were built, and faith looked up, 'till Jacob like 'twas given

From this dear spot to see again God's ladder up to heaven;

And feel the angels of His power descending from above,

'Till all the earth and sky were full of consecrated love;

And from this Bethel-place which marked full many a wrestling night,

The Lord's ambassadors went forth, to bear the gospel light.

It was a plain old parsonage with never spire, or dome,

Yet many a weary preacher found within its walls a home.

But Time, which brings to all decay, had touched its whitened doors,

He left his handmarks on the walls and warped the well trod floors,

He made the roof to bend as one whose head is bowed with age,

And the loosened windows tremble at the storm-king's fitful rage,

The weakened floors unsteady grew and gave forth many a groan,

And bending with each footstep, the creaking stairs made moan;

And many a crack by wall, or door, let in the winter's cold,

And showed to every passer by the house was getting old.

That poor old house like human life—however bright or fair

Time touched, and lo his fingers left a withered impress there;

We saw its neighbors rising up in beauty, fresh and bold,

While it was getting feebler and looking sadly old.
And somehow down within our hearts we felt this would not do,
The Lord must have a better house, a building strong and true;
For we read it in the book, He gave, as plain as it could be,
"As ye did it to my little ones, ye did it unto me."

And in the Blessed City where the many mansions be,
Where the golden streets are glittering like sunshine on the sea,
Where on the verdant hillsides, which cluster 'round the throne,
Are built the heavenly palaces with one to call our own:
Amid those dazzling splendors, what mockery to our bliss,
If the Angels built our dwellings there a pattern after this!
Since God is just, and watches all, I would not think it queer
If He should give us just the same as we have given Him here.

And so we talked together, and then we talked to Him,
While hopes and fears commingled and our anxious eyes grew
dim.

Oh! we would have built a palace out of gold from mountain springs,

And decorated it with gems to give our King of Kings.
We would have made its beauty by all the world adored,
And then the gift were far too small to offer to the Lord.
But we worked and prayed together and did the best we could,
This house is built of Faith, and Love, instead of stone and wood.

The work complete and finished by the architect's control,
Was still a useless tenement until it found a soul;
These walls were white and beautiful, but felt no conscious pride
Until they felt the breathing of the living soul inside;
And so we moved our Pastor in—dear man of God, who brings
Our thirsty souls the water, from the ever living springs;—
And we brought his household treasures—his lovely girls and boys—

And she whose tender love and faith illumines all his joys,
A consecrated wealth of power—this is the soul divine—
Oh parsonage! no common form had ever soul like thine.

The old house did its mission well. And here we bring the new,
A gift to God—"Tis not enough, He wants the givers too.

He wants the faith and prayer which such a goodly harvest yields,

To gather sheaves of golden grain from earth's neglected fields.

It is not much our hands may do, but we can bring the best

Of loving faith our hearts may know, and God will do the rest.

And when life's evening shadows fall, we'll gather bye and bye,

In the home of many mansions—our Father's house on high.

Letters of Jane McClelland McEwen to her Aunt,
Jane E. Wheat Hearn.

Columbus, Indiana,

July 16, 1890.

My Dear Aunt (Jane Eliza Wheat Hearn):

I received your letter yesterday evening, and I cannot tell you how glad I was to get it. I had thought of writing to you several times recently, but have been so busy, and the weather has been so warm that I have neglected it. I was so sorry to hear of Aunt Sinie's death, and to think of her eight motherless children makes my heart ache. I am so glad you went to see them, although your visit must have been a sad one. Why didn't you come on to Columbus? We would have been so glad to have had you here. This leaves us all well as usual. Father is at our house today. He is very feeble, but his general health is good. He is now near his eightieth birthday. His eye sight has failed so that he cannot read or write any more, and you know what a great deprivation that would be to him. His mind is clear, and he don't forget anything. He is able to get about—goes up town every day. He is always so glad to hear from any of his old friends. He was so glad to get your letter. Our men folks are about through with their busy work. Anna is spending her summer vacation at home. She will teach again the coming winter—the same school she had last winter—not quite a mile from home. The boys are both at home; no prospects of any of them marrying. We are talking of building a new house this fall. We want to get into it before winter sets in. Mary Ann and family are well. Mr. Davis' health is much better than it was a few years ago. He is Township Trustee now—was appointed two years ago, when the Trustee died, and was elected at the spring election for the ensuing four years. Gordon is still in the train dispatcher's office. (He will be 21 the fourth of August.) John is in school yet—will graduate next year. He is collector for one of the daily papers and for several business firms, so that he makes good wages for a boy of his age. Anna visited a school friend at Marion, Indiana the first Sunday in June. I expect you was in Grant County about that time too. Father has one brother and one sister living yet—Uncle John and Aunt Ann live in the country west of town yet. My husband's health is very much better than it used to be. He is quite stout now, but getting gray. I have some gray hairs, but Mary Ann has more than I. I am about as fleshy as ever, but have good health, except a touch of rheumatism once in a while. Now, Aunt, write again. Oh, I almost forgot—Mary Ann and I will give you something towards a stone for grandfather's grave. Will send it to you next month. How much do you want from us? We will send $5.00 and maybe more. Now write again soon. Give my love to all your family and the relatives and friends. Tell me of Isabel and her brothers when you write, and of Morehouses. Do you ever hear from any of the relatives in the West? Tell your folks some of them might come and see me. Any of them would be welcome. Hoping soon to hear from you, I am your niece

JANE McEWEN.

Columbus, Indiana,
August 9, 1900.

My Dear Aunt and Uncle (Jane E. and William Hearn):

Sister Mary Ann received Rowenas letter yesterday, and it lies before me now. I cannot tell you how glad I am that you have been spared to celebrate this fiftieth anniversary, nor how sorry I am that I cannot be with you at the rare celebration. I have not been in my usual good health this summer, so cannot leave home in such torrid weather. Last March, I had my left breast entirely removed, as it was full of cancerous tumors. I was in the hospital three weeks, but it was over two months before the wound entirely healed. My left arm has been almost useless ever since the operation, and I have not the strength I had before. I have to be very careful about getting my blood overheated, and take a blood medicine all the time. I cannot comb my hair, or fasten my clothes in the back, so am not in very good shape to leave home. Mary Ann and Will have just returned from a trip to Niagara Falls; went on passes furnished by their son, John, who is chief clerk in the road master's office of the J. D. & W. Railroad. They stopped over night in Winchester and saw as many old friends as possible in so short a time. Since their return, Will's niece from Cleveland, Ohio, has come to spend her vacation (three weeks) with them—so Mary Ann says she cannot go to your anniversary. I wish I could be with you, for I do want to see you all more than I can tell, and, then, such occasions are so rare in these days of easy divorces that I think they should be celebrated always. Two years ago, Uncle John and Aunt Ann McClelland celebrated their golden wedding, and that is the only celebration of that kind that I ever attended. I hope, however, when the weather is cooler to see you all, as I have thought all summer I would go to Winchester and Portland late this fall, about the time of your Fair, but I am not sure I will be there. I regret that I have not a suitable present to send you in honor of this anniversary, but all I can send is my love and good wishes, for your health and prosperity in the years to come. I have thought so much since reading Rowenas letter of the changes that have taken place in the time that has passed since your marriage. Most of the relations on both sides have gone to the better land. But there is the blessed hope of a reunion of all in a land beyond the grave. I want you to write me a full minute description of the affair, and remember that we will be with you in spirit. Give my love to all the relatives, especially your own family. With love, your niece

JENNIE McCLELLAND McEWEN.

Letter from Jane E. Hearn to her Father, Rev. Thomas Wheat

Portland, Indiana,

May 31, 1852.

Father:

We are well. All is well now. I must tell you the painful news of Cecelia's death. Poor girl, she is gone—gone and left us. She died the twenty-eighth, of consumption. She was buried next day. I was not present when she died, but I heard all the particulars of Mary McClelland and Mary Gillett and Joseph Gillett. They were present all the time she was dying. Oh, Father, I cannot write half nor quarter part I have to tell you. Mary Mc. came out just one week before she died and stayed with her. She told me that on Tuesday before she died, she prayed all day long and, in the evening, when they were eating their suppers, she sung to herself (for they all heard her distinctly) these words:

Come on my partner in distress,
My comrade through this wilderness, whom still your body fill;
Awhile forget your griefs and fears
And look beyond this vale of tears, to that celestial hill.

Then, on Thursday, she appeared some better, but they knew she could not get well, and Mary, with fear of her departure, sent for Joseph (brother of Lucy Hunt Gillett Wheat) and Mary Gillett to stay that night. The next morning, she had a very hard spell, and they thought she would not live through another day, so Mary Mc. told Jacob to tell Cecelia that she could not get well. Jacob went in the house and told her. Mary did not go in, but she stood at the door and listened. She heard every word that was said. When Jacob told Cecelia that she was a going to die, it did not alarm her a bit, she said the Will of the Lord be done, and then smiled. She looked up and said, "Jacob, I am going home to heaven. Will you seek the forgiveness of your sins and meet me there?" "Yes," was his reply. Then Mary went in and sat down, and Cecelia called her to her and said, "Mary, don't you think Jacob promised to meet in heaven, and, oh, how glad it makes me feel." Then Mary asked her if she felt any embarrassment on her mind and if she was willing to die. She said, "I am perfectly resigned, perfectly resigned." She said it three times. She said she felt her sins all forgiven her some time ago. Not long after that, she said, "Mary, why don't father come? Why don't Jane come? Oh, how I would like to see them, but I never can. Then she gasped, and they asked her what she wanted, and she said, "Nothing; only I want to die. I can hardly wait. Oh, when I die, I will see my dear mother and William." Then she laughed aloud, and called her friends to her and requested them all to meet her in heaven. They all promised. I cannot say much more about Cecelia; only she would have them set her in a chair, where she breathed her last. She was sensible that she was dying until the last. She died without a struggle. She merely went to sleep. The funeral was very solemn and affectionate. They all seemed to mourn her loss. Her funeral was attended by M. McLaughlen and W. Valentine. They spoke from these words: Be ye also ready, for ye know not the hour in which I come. She is better off now by far than she would of been to of lived. You may wonder at my saying so, but, father, I have a heap to tell you. What they told me about that poor girl when she was dying and dead. Stuff it was. I shall never forget. Mary was soul sick about it. Nobody ever told it—only Jacob and his folks. I will tell you when you come. Come immediately. Delay not a moment. You must come and tend to your affairs. Come here first. I want to go with you. Jacob says he will keep house and do nothing with the things 'till you come. They gave me nothing at all of Cecelia's—not the first Skrimption, neither did they give Mary Ann any thing, but Mary took the old family Bible by force. Oh, I hate to see my mother's things in their hands, but I cannot help it. Come right off, pap, don't wait a minute. I can tell you four times as much when I see you. Give my best respects to mother and the children. I can tell no more now. We have had a great deal of rain here this spring. No more at present.

Jane E. Hearn.
June 4.

REV. THOMAS WHEAT,

Trask Postoffice,

(In Haste)

Grant County, Indiana.

In Memory of John M. Hearn.

(The following poem was written for John Melbourn Hearn, by his mother, Jane E. Wheat Hearn, late of Portland, Indiana. Her son died December 3, 1863.)

'Twas the first day of June, so lovely and fair,
 To visit the graveyard, we thought to repair.
 Where loved ones are buried, a child once most dear,
 And seek for his tomb, in memory there.
 And there was a peony, all out in full bloom.
 With crimson face bowing, her head o'er his tomb.
 And the tall stately phlox, pointing up toward heaven,
 A union of souls is the language that's given.
 A child, all ambition, to excel was his boon,
 God called him, come higher, in childhood so soon.
 The spirit's now singing with angels on high,
 No sorrows, no suffering, no more here to die.
 As I knelt my self down at the foot of his grave,
 I thought of the One: Who died, sinners to save.
 And with trembling hand, planted a button-rose there,
 The emblem of true love, and beauty most rare.
 Mount upward, dear spirit, 'till the zenith is reached,
 Seven heavens we read of, the Apostle Paul preached;
 Thou hast gone on before, a home to prepare
 For our languishing souls; hope to meet thee up there.

An Acrostic.

June's fairest flowers may bud and bloom,
 Among the lillies of the field;—
 Nature, her rich fruits and sweet perfume,
 Every where may plenty yield.
 Enticing scenes may attract thine eye—
 Love oft may fill thy tender breast—
 Indeed the whole may be a tie;
 Zephyr-like it may all pass by
 And leave the still by none cares'd.

Note—The above was written by Jane Eliza Wheat before her marriage to William Hearn.

Poem Written on Receipt of the Old Wheat Family Bible.

This old family Bible, this dear blessed Bible. What treasures this Bible doth hold: The Wheat family record of good long ago, in the lids of this Bible are told. My father's old Bible, a treasure to him more precious than silver or gold.

JANE E. WHEAT HEARN.

Note—On receiving word of the death of Rev. Thomas Wheat, William Hearn, because of the almost impassable roads at this time of year, rode the forty miles horseback, from Portland to Trask, to attend the funeral. On his return he brought to Jane her Father's Bible. Rowena E. Randle has this Bible in her possession.

OBITUARY

(Following is the Obituary of the late Jane Eliza Wheat Hearn of Portland, Indiana; written by her daughter, Rowena Hearn Randle).

Jane Eliza (Wheat) Hearn, daughter of Thomas and Hannah Patterson Wheat, was born at Painted Post, N. Y., January 5, 1835. She was united in marriage to William Hearn, August 11, 1850. She was the youngest of thirteen children. When Thomas Wheat moved west, Jane was two years old. They settled in Portland and lived there for seven years; then moved to a farm in Noble Township, where they endured real pioneer life. Many times Jane has built fires during the night to keep the wolves from eating calves, pigs and chickens. It was in those days the girls were rated for the most cuts of yarn they could spin in a day. Jeans, woolens, linsey and linens were all home-made, and tailor-made clothes were almost unknown. Jane and William Hearn, after marriage, moved on a farm two and one-half miles south-west of Portland, in the woods, where they joined hands and endured hardships, cleared their farm and reared their children to manhood and womanhood, except one son, John M., who died at the age of nine years. In 1900, their children and friends helped them to celebrate their Golden Wedding. Then, in 1903, they moved to Portland, where, in 1908, William Hearn left his companion for his heavenly home. Being left alone, Jane, with her youngest son, Robert L. Hearn kept house for five years. Since then, she has lived with her children, but always yearning for the time when she could have an earthly home, then go to her heavenly home. Jane's father, Thomas Wheat, was a licensed minister in the M. E. Church; the same being granted in 1827. The Rev. Wheat, after moving west, took up circuit work; going horse-back to his appointments, and, as Jane was his youngest daughter and a good singer, she accompanied him on his work. Jane, having been converted and joined the church when 10 years of age. They went horse-back through the woods and mud. She riding on the horse behind her father, and, at the meetings, would lead the singing. During the Civil War, she joined the United Brethren Church, because of her belief in the freedom of the slaves, and she has been a silent but true member the remainder of her years. Others who immigrated from the neighborhood of Painted Post were the Myers, Gillets, Journeys and the Morehouses. The only one now remaining of the above families is William Myers, who was able to come and review the remains of his old school mate. He being one year older than Jane.

Jane E. Hearn is survived by the following children: Patterson M. Hearn, Rowena E. Randle, Charles A. Hearn, William U. Hearn and Robert L. Hearn (the one son, John, and daughter, Mary Jane, having preceded her sixty and twenty-nine years ago respectively); and fourteen nephews and neices, John Wheat and William Wheat, residents of this city, and eleven grandchildren, and eight great grandchildren. Mother Hearn was a consistent citizen and lived an honest exemplary life, always teaching her children honesty and sobriety.
